What are other federal government departments doing?

Posted on 20 September 2011

The field of wellbeing indicators and measuring progress is getting bigger and bigger, with a range of new players entering this field every day. This also includes federal departments (apart from us!). Here is some information on just a few of them.

One of the departments that is developing indicators with help from us is the Department of Sustainability, Environment, Water, Population and Communities (SEWPaC - pronounced 'sew' (like sewing) 'pack'). For more click here
